In 2012 the Foundation will keep its guidelines broad, casting a wide net and seeking new partners, as well as deepening its engagement with a subset of existing partners, to learn how people in the field might enhance the Foundation's understanding of transformative leadership and courageous storytelling and their relationship to mobilizing collective imagination and action. While the Foundation will look across the spectrum of progressive issue areas, it has a particular interest in work happening within and between the Foundation's traditional areas of work-peace, environment, reproductive health and rights. Within those fields, the Foundation sees particular momentum in the areas of sustainable food systems, money in politics, reproductive justice, and climate/energy solutions. The Foundation is also interested in exploring the fields of women in peace building and alternative economics. The Foundation supports 501(c)(3) organizations based in the United States.

The Foundation intends to further the humanities along a broad front, supporting projects which address the concerns of the historical studia humanitatis: a humanistic education rooted in the great traditions of the past; the formation of human beings according to cultural, moral, and aesthetic ideals derived from that past; and the ongoing debate over how these ideals may best be conceived and realized. Programs in the following areas are eligible: history; archaeology; literature; languages, both classical and modern; philosophy, ethics; comparative religion; the history, criticism, and theory of the arts; and those aspects of the social sciences which share the content and methods of humanistic disciplines. The Foundation welcomes projects that cross the boundaries between humanistic disciplines and explore the connection between the humanities and other areas of scholarship. The Humanities Program is primarily directed to institutions of higher education and humanistic enterprises such as learned societies, museums, and major editorial projects. The program may also consider, on a selective basis, projects that increase the exposure of those outside these institutions to the humanistic experience or that strengthen preparation for the humanistic disciplines in secondary education. The prime criterion remains that of Gladys and Jean Paul Delmas: a commitment to excellence, whether proven or promised. In 2008, grants were made ranging from about $5,000 to $135,000.

HENRY BELIN DU PONT FELLOWSHIP

WEB: <http://www.hagley.org/library/center/hbdupontfellow.html>

These research grants enable scholars to pursue advanced research and study in the library, archival, pictorial, and artifact collections of the Hagley Museum and Library. They honor the memory of Henry Belin du Pont, a founding trustee and long-time supporter of Hagley, and are funded in part by the Henry Belin du Pont Memorial Fund which supports access to and use of Hagley's research collections. These grants are intended to support serious scholarly work that makes use of Hagley's research collections and expands on prior scholarship. Potential applicants are strongly encouraged to consult with Hagley staff prior to submitting their application. Research grants are awarded for the length of time needed to make use of Hagley collections for a specific project. The stipends are for a maximum of eight weeks and are pro-rated at $400/week for recipients who reside further than 50 miles from Hagley, and $200/week for those within 50 miles. A research report is due one month after the end of the residency at Hagley. Low-cost accommodations on Hagley's grounds are available on first-come, first serve basis.
