NATIONAL ACADEMIES OF SCIENCES ■ ENGINEERING ■ MEDICINE

JEFFERSON SCIENCE FELLOWSHIP

DUE: November 2

WEB: www.nas.edu/jsf

CONTACT: H. Ray Gamble, Ph.D.

Director, Fellowships Office

National Academies of Sciences,

Engineering, Medicine

500 Fifth Street, NW

Washington, DC 20001

The contribution of state-of-the-art science, technology, and engineering (STE) to the formulation and implementation of U.S. government policy, both domestic and foreign, has been recognized throughout the second half of the 20th-century as a critical element in reaching sound, comprehensive conclusions that reflect "good governance." Without an accurate, timely understanding of rapidly advancing STE issues, it is increasingly difficult to identify and establish sound governmental policy that effectively meets the needs of modern societies. The articulation of "accurate science for statecraft" to policy makers has become an essential element in establishing effective international relationships in the 21st century.

Recognizing this need, the Secretary of State announced, on October 8, 2003, the Jefferson Science Fellows (JSF) program at the U.S. Department of State, establishing a new model for engaging the American academic science, technology, engineering and medical communities in the formulation and implementation of U.S. foreign policy. The JSF program is administered by the National Academies and supported through a partnership between the U.S. academic community, professional scientific societies, the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). ELIGIBILITY: The Jefferson Science Fellowship is open to tenured, or similarly ranked, faculty from U.S. institutions of higher learning who are U.S. citizens. The application period opens each fall and closes in mid-January. Selected Jefferson Science Fellows spend one year on assignment at the U.S. Department of State or USAID as science advisors on foreign policy issues. Assignments are tailored to the needs of the hosting office, while taking into account the Fellows' interests and areas of expertise. As part of their assignments, Jefferson Fellows also have the opportunity to travel to U.S. embassies and missions overseas. Following the fellowship year, the Jefferson Science Fellow will return to his/her academic career, but will remain available to the U.S. government as an experienced consultant for short-term projects. For the 2016 program year, it is expected that the U.S. Department of State and USAID will host up to 15 Jefferson Science Fellows; the fellowship begins in mid-August. Visit the How to Apply page to view eligibility criteria, terms of the fellowship and instructions for applying.

The American Antiquarian Society (AAS), a national research library and learned society of American history and culture, is calling for applications for visiting fellowships for historical research by creative and performing artists, writers, film makers, journalists, and other persons whose goals are to produce imaginative, non-formulaic works dealing with pre-twentieth-century American history. Successful applicants are those whose work is for the general public rather than for academic or educational audiences. The Society's goal in sponsoring this program is to multiply and improve the ways in which an understanding of history is communicated to the American people. The fellowships will provide the recipients with the opportunity for a period of uninterrupted research, reading, and collegial discussion at the Society, located in Worcester, Massachusetts. FUNDING: For fellows who reside on campus in the Society's scholars' housing, located next to the main library building, the stipend will have the room fee deducted from the $1850 stipend. (Room fees range from $700 to $500 per month.) The stipend will be $1,850 for fellows residing off campus. Fellows will not be paid a travel allowance. At least three fellowships will be awarded for residence of four weeks at the Society at any time during the period January 1 through December 31.

Since 1933, the American Philosophical Society has awarded small grants to scholars in order to support the cost of research leading to publication in all areas of knowledge. In 2014-2015 the Franklin Research Grants program awarded $491,700 to 97 scholars, and the Society expects to make a similar number of awards in this year's competition. The Franklin program is particularly designed to help meet the costs of travel to libraries and archives for research purposes; the purchase of microfilm, photocopies, or equivalent research materials; the costs associated with fieldwork; or laboratory research expenses. ELIGIBILITY: Applicants are expected to have a doctorate or to have published work of doctoral character and quality. Ph.D. candidates are not eligible to apply, but the Society is particularly interested in supporting the work of young scholars who have recently received the doctorate. Independent scholars and faculty members at all four-year and two-year research and non-research institutions are welcome to apply provided that all eligibility guidelines are met. American citizens and residents of the United States may use their Franklin awards at home or abroad. Foreign nationals not affiliated with a U.S. institution must use their Franklin awards for research in the United States. FUNDING: Funding is offered up to a maximum of $6,000. CENTER FOR ADVANCED STUDY IN

INDIVIDUAL POST-DOCTORAL RESIDENTIAL FELLOWSHIP

DUE: November 6

WRITE: Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences
75 Alta Road
Stanford, CA 94305

WEB: <http://www.casbs.org/individual-residential-fellowships>

PHONE: 650 736-0100; FAX: 650 736-0221

The Center offers a residential fellowship program for scholars from this country and abroad. Since 1954, CASBS fellowships have been awarded to scholars working in a diverse range of disciplines. These include the five core social and behavioral sciences (anthropology, economics, political science, psychology, and sociology) as well as a wide range of humanistic disciplines, education, linguistics, communications, and the biological, natural, health, and computer sciences. CASBS is a collaborative environment. The aim is to bring disciplines into contact with each other-to broaden scholars beyond their specialized training. The Center seeks fellows who will be both influential with, and open to influence by, their colleagues in the diverse multidisciplinary cohort the Center assembles for a given year. ELIGIBILITY: The ideal candidate for a CASBS fellowship is a highly accomplished academic (relative to career stage) - a major thinker whose work is consistently excellent, innovative, important, and influential. Specifically, the qualified applicant: (1) Has a PhD, professional degree (e.g., JD, MD), an equivalent foreign degree, or has achieved an equivalent level of professional reputation. (2) Is three to four years past the doctorate or equivalent degree. (CASBS does not offer post-doctoral fellowships.) (3) Is an academic faculty member-or an independent scholar-who exhibits a high level of achievement (adjusted for rank), including a strong record of research publications. (4) Is engaged in significant lines of research in a field of the behavioral/social sciences, or does work in the natural sciences or humanities that has important human behavioral and social dimensions. (5) Communicates clearly in English. (6) Is someone who is very interested in participating in regular interdisciplinary conversations. (7) Is willing to commit to being in residence for the course of the fellowship year without conflicting commitments. FUNDING: As appropriate, stipends for the academic year will be awarded to supplement faculty sabbatical support; a significant portion of the fellow's total support is generally provided by sabbatical funds and external funding from awards and grants secured by the fellow. Except in unusual circumstances, Center stipend support is contingent on the applicant's provision of firm assurances of matching funds.
